SAFE OF PAYMASTER IN BOSTON HARBOR TORN AND LOOTED OF $3,500

Thirty-five hundred dollars were stolen from the safe of Paymaster Lawrence Gilman Haughey aboard the United States gunboat Carline, now at the Charlestown Navy Yard. This fact became known today. The safe, when the robbery was discovered, was locked and Paymaster Haughey's room, where safe was, was locked. An attendant has since found $800 hidden behind a bathtub in the vessel.

BEGINS INVESTIGATION OF ROBBERY.

A board of inquiry consisting of the grand juror and two senior officers, one day after the robbery, is at work trying to unravel the mystery. There is no doubt on the part of the investigating board that the theft is connected with the Carline. Paymaster Haughey declares that he has no knowledge of the combination of the safe. He knows it was there, but he does not know the combination. The safe was in the Carline's storeroom, and he was in the room at the time the safe was broken. The safe was in the storeroom, and he was in the room at the time the safe was broken. The safe was in the storeroom, and he was in the room at the time the safe was broken.

"DR." COWLES INDICTED ON TWO COUNTS

Edward S. Cowles, better known as "Doc" Cowles, the man who attended the charges against Lieutenant George F. Auld, which resulted in the court martial of that officer at the Charlestown Navy Yard, was today indicted on two counts, charging him with the illegal practice of medicine. The indictment was returned this morning by the grand jury, which had been in extraordinary session last week. Cowles appeared before Judge Wait in the Superior Criminal Court. He pleaded not guilty and deposited $500 cash bail, after which he was allowed to go. The first count charges Cowles with holding himself out to be a regular physician on December 1, 1909, when in fact and law he was not registered for practice in this state. The second count charges him with practicing medicine without being a registered physician.

Action against Cowles was taken up by Assistant District Attorney Lavelle at the direction of his superior, Mr. Fletcher, without waiting for a hearing. The indictment was returned by the grand jury at the court martial of George F. Auld. At the court martial it was decided that Cowles had been a regular physician on December 1, 1909, when in fact and law he was not registered for practice in this state. The second count charges him with practicing medicine without being a registered physician.

It's Folly For Woman to Wed Her Junior

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

PERHAPS it is the clinging of the vision which lingers behind from the eyes of the aging woman and causes her to make such serious mistakes frequently.

One of these mistakes is to marry a young man who resembles the faded face and the faded smile and the old eyes.

"The story of women is to be told," someone has said, "and the tale of the eyes of the young woman and the eyes of the old woman is the tale of the eyes of the young woman and the eyes of the old woman."

The fact is that the eyes of the young woman are the eyes of the young woman and the eyes of the old woman are the eyes of the old woman.

Her Age of Perfection.

A woman of thirty-five, when she has reached every age of beauty, should be at her perfection of beauty, but at the age of thirty-five, when she has reached every age of beauty, she is at her perfection of beauty.

She is at her perfection of beauty, but at the age of thirty-five, when she has reached every age of beauty, she is at her perfection of beauty.

She is at her perfection of beauty, but at the age of thirty-five, when she has reached every age of beauty, she is at her perfection of beauty.

Going Against Nature.

Nothing more unnatural can be found in the universe than the mating of a young man with an elderly woman.

The young girl may marry the old man for love and affection, but the old man may marry the young girl for money and power.

The young girl may marry the old man for love and affection, but the old man may marry the young girl for money and power.

"Perfect Beauty Should Smile and Strut--But Be Dumb"--By Nell Brinkley

Woman Talks of Loved One Man is Silent

By MABEL HERBERT URMER

"If he should have known?" she asked. "He should have known."

"But that is something very new," she said. "A woman's desire to talk of the one she loves? It is a new thing, the strongest instinct is to keep it secret. The woman wants to talk of the one she loves."

"And that's what I have known," she said. "I have known that a woman's desire to talk of the one she loves is a new thing, the strongest instinct is to keep it secret. The woman wants to talk of the one she loves."

Your Spring Tonic

To take a tonic in the spring is only aiding nature. Every human being, young or old, needs it. Confinement to the home, the store or the office during the cold months has reduced your vitality.

You are beginning to notice that tired feeling. Perhaps eruptions are appearing on your face or body.

Nothing alarming--You simply need a Spring Tonic--a bracer.

Something to tone up the whole system, cleanse the blood, start up a healthy circulation and regulate your liver.

Don't experiment this spring, try a bottle of Jaynes' Blood and Nerve Tonic on your recommendation. It has been giving satisfaction for 15 years. Made of health-giving roots and herbs, so nicely made that it will not upset the most delicate stomach.

Study carefully the list of drugs taken and what they are known to be good for. They are all in Jaynes' Blood and Nerve Tonic.

"Travelling Salesman" Comes Back as Funny and Bright as Ever

The "Travelling Salesman," younger brother of "The Circus Train," is now in Boston, this time at the Hotel St. Charles, without a harness to show for his year's run. With all due respect to the very little drama that is being put on in Boston and the center in general that James Froux, the author, did a better job on his second play.

The comedy is clever in every detail and so delightful in some. The house was crowded on the opening night and everybody laughed at its stately humor from the start to the finish.

The oldest thing about the play is the strength of its serious scenes. It is a comedy and a tragedy, with a little story of the summer love and the pretty little tragedy operator who comes out from the wiles of two husbands. The play is a comedy and a tragedy, with a little story of the summer love and the pretty little tragedy operator who comes out from the wiles of two husbands.

Grand Opera House.

"East Lynne" has lost none of its hold on the theatrical public. It is a play which has demonstrated its ability to attract an audience which appreciates the play as a whole. The story of the drama is a thoroughly human one, full of sentimentality with an appeal to the sympathies of the audience. The trials of Lady Elvina are as touching as the scenes of her life.
